

How do I see myself if I develop dementia?

Inspired by the powerful self-portraits of artist William Utermohlen during his years of struggle with Alzheimer's and leveraging a large-scale model for object recognition, I show aberrations in the integration of perpetual priors create haunting perceptual abnormalities when processing an image of my face.

Tahereh Toosi
Center for Theoretical Neuroscience
Columbia University

1967

1995

Diagnosed

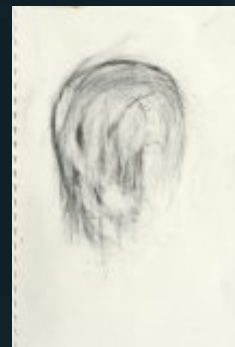

1996

1997

2000

2001

William Charles Utermohlen
(1933 – 2007)
Figurative artist

